RE: PAROXETINE BIPOLAR DEPRESSION STUDY

Dear Neil:

Now that this paper has been published in American Journal of Psychiatry, we have reviewed the billing and editorial history of this extended and difficult project. A final invoice is enclosed. You and I have discussed the excessive work necessary to bring this manuscript to publication, which far exceeds the expectations upon which our proposal of April 3, 1998 were based.

The major elements that exceeded our proposal are listed below:

1. The manuscript was published at Draft X; the original price was based on 4 drafts
2. The manuscript was submitted 3 times to the journal
3. A total of 3 point-by-point rebuttal statements were written to correspond with the 1st resubmission, the 2nd resubmission, and the final changes requested by the journal at the galley stage
4. STI obtained 2 separate sets of release forms from all authors (required by the journal)
5. Purchase of 400 reprints for Dr Nemeroff/Neuroscience Sales Force

We made every attempt to streamline this process and stay within the budget (see enclosed project history). However, disagreements between authors, several statistical reanalyses requiring revision of the text and tables, and the retooling of the manuscript to make it less promotional were well beyond our original predictions. As a result of these multiple factors, we must assess additional charges in the amount of $13,286.81 (invoice enclosed).

I look forward to discussing this with you at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely,
